Would-be victims foil robberies

ATTACK Three knife-wielding assailants ran away empty-handed after their victims lashed out during two separate failed robberies Saturday night, Halifax Regional Police say.

The first incident took place before 9 p.m., when two males approached a man walking along Summer Street near Spring Garden Road in Halifax and demanded he hand over his jewelry while threatening him with a knife, police said. The man instead punched one of the would-be robbers and was able to escape.

The second incident happened near Herring Cove Road and Withrow Drive around 11:30 p.m. when a man grabbed a knife from his would-be robber, who then fled, police said.

Tough times can bring out the best in people. And that is the case here, according to the president and CEO of United Way of Halifax Region.

"We're seeing people rally forward," Catherine J. Woodman tells Metro Halifax. "We're seeing people really seizing this opportunity to get involved."

As the country fights through a recession, Woodman says the need is great in Halifax Regional Municipality for people to give back to their communities.

Five ways to give back

Catherine J. Woodman, president and CEO of United Way of Halifax Region, gives five easy things people can do to give back to their communities.

- Give stuff: Donate your gently used possessions to organizations that can reuse them to help others.
- Give time: For example, mow your elderly neighbour's lawn or host a block party.
- Give expertise or effort: Volunteer your skills at a local organization.

And volunteering or donating doesn't have to involve giving money, she's quick to add.

She says there are many other ways to give back, from stuffing envelopes for a not-for-profit charity to visiting seniors in nursing homes.

Woodman says the United Way works with 55 not-for-profit organizations in HRM, and anyone interested in volunteering can sit down with organizers to find out what might be the best way for them to help.

She says there has been consistently more demand for not-for-profit groups in the last five to 10 years, but with the recession getting so much attention, "individuals have a lot more empathy right now for others who are struggling."

"It's harder and we're working harder, but we're still getting tremendous support from the community," she says. "Some people have less to give, but they're still giving."

CRIME Halifax Regional Municipality can add to its growing list of violent crimes this month, with Halifax Regional Police responding to a man shot in the city's north end Friday night and RCMP receiving a call of shots fired in Fall River Saturday.

HRP said officers showed up on Creighton Street in Halifax at 8:15 p.m. Friday, but when they arrived the male victim, who sustained several gunshot wounds, had already been taken to Queen Elizabeth II Health Sciences Centre. He was later released with non-life-threatening injuries. Investigators learned suspects might have taken off in a dark-coloured, four-door car.

Halifax RCMP arrived at a Philip Drive home in Fall River at 1:50 p.m. Saturday. The house reportedly belongs to James Melvin Sr.

"One shot actually hit a residence and we seized some bullet fragments," spokesman Cpl. Joe Taplin said yesterday, adding police are looking for a car, possibly a black Acura.

Several media outlets reported Jimmy Melvin Jr. was inside at the time, but Taplin wouldn't confirm that. The Melvins are a well-known local family linked to crime and are suspected of being in a drug war.

There have been several shootings in HRM this month, in addition to three murders.

"We're all together," Ignatieff told a group of supporters. "There is one party ... when federal and provincial (parties) are together ... nobody can stop us."

"Nova Scotians are looking to our party for leadership," McNeil said at the Dartmouth Sportsplex, the same place he launched his leadership campaign. "We can no longer continue to divide ourselves or we will remain ... the worst performing economy in our country."

Ignatieff and McNeil both criticized the federal and provincial governments for dividing Nova Scotia and Canada.

Tories want parents to be liable for kids' actions

PROPERTY CRIMES The Progressive Conservatives proposed a law to make parents liable for their children's property crimes Friday.

It came one day after the Tories proposed a curfew where parents would face a $500 fine if their kids are caught outside alone between the hours of 1 a.m. and 6 a.m., a news release said.

The property crimes law would make parents responsible for up to $5,000 in damages if their child damages or steals someone's property.

The Tories say parental defences could include that they were exercising reasonable supervision over the child at the time of the offence or made reasonable efforts to prevent the activity.

NDP justice critic Bill Estabrooks called the move a stab in the dark to try to appeal to voters.

"This is legislation by appearance, and not effectiveness," Estabrooks said in a news release. METRO HALIFAX

Green platform stresses action

PAUL MCLEOD
paul.mcleod@metronews.ca

POLITICS The Green party unveiled its provincial platform Friday for only the second time in the province's history.

In the 2006 election the Greens received 2.3 per cent of the vote and had no candidates elected.

So it's not surprising they see their role more as advocating for change than taking a real run at leading the province.

"What I'm not seeing is an understanding that this is urgent. We have got to work for our planet and we've got to work for our economy right now."

N.S. Green Party Leader Ryan Watson

"We're

looking to raise the level of dialogue in this election," said Nova Scotia Green Party Leader Ryan Watson. "And to the next government, we're looking to make that government the best possible that it can be for Nova Scotia."

The Green platform centres on moving towards renewable energy, conservation and using the Genuine Progress Index to rate the province instead of GDP growth.

However, the party did not have any predictions of what any of their promises would cost. Watson did say all of their promises are realistic and the platform was a vision of where the province needs to go.

He also criticized the other parties' environmental platforms for having a lack of vision.

"I'm just not really seeing them," he said. "What I'm not seeing is an understanding that this is urgent. We have got to work for our planet and we've got to work for our economy right now."

The party plans to field a full slate of 52 candidates in the June 9 election.

Mike Oddy was at the Maritime Museum of the Atlantic yesterday, showing off for the first time the diorama he gave the museum to mark the 250th anniversary of Halifax's naval dockyard.

The gift, like the anniversary, has been a long time coming. The diorama is a nine-foot long depiction of HMC Dockyard back in 1813. Oddy began working on it 16 years ago with four other men, and he says he has put about 8,000 hours of work into the model's construction.

Oddy was the only one of the group able to see the project through to completion, and he was at the museum yesterday to unveil it before a small crowd of visitors, museum officials and naval officers.

The diorama shows what the dockyard would have looked like 196 years ago next Sunday, on the day after an important British

Man wanted in drug store robbery

CRIME An armed man walked into a Halifax drug store Friday evening and walked out with some stolen medication, police said.

The robber entered the Pharmsave at 30 Farnham Gate Road, located inside the Rockingham Ridge Plaza, at about 5:35 p.m., Halifax Regional Police said.

He then threatened the store clerk working inside with a knife and snatched "a quantity of pills," according to a police report released Saturday.

The man was described to Halifax Regional Police as a white man who appears to be between 30 and 35 years old, about six-feet tall and between 225 and 250 pounds, possibly with dark-coloured eyes.

He was wearing a brown stocking over his face, a white ball cap with mesh backing, a white undershirt with a beige long sleeve button-up shirt over top, blue jeans, dark brown shoes and a watch with a black strap when the robbery occurred. METRO HALIFAX

Tories plan EI changes

POLITICS Human Resources Minister Diane Finley is announcing improvements to the employment insurance (EI) program today but it won't be enough to head off a collision with the Liberals that threatens to derail the Conservative minority government and force a spring election.

Finley's initiative is meant to help laid-off workers but a senior government source said it's nothing like the major overhaul of the EI system being demanded by opposition parties.

Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff has threatened to topple Prime Minister Stephen Harper's government unless the Conservatives reform EI to make it easier to workers who lose their jobs to access insurance payments.

Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff has threatened to topple the Conservatives if EI isn't made more accessible.

The Liberals want the government to establish a national threshold of 360 paid hours of work for workers to qualify for EI during the economic downturn. Currently, depending on where a worker lives, it takes between 420 and 910 hours of paid work to be eligible.

A government spokesperson said yesterday the Conservatives have no intention of meeting that demand. "We would have to raise payroll taxes to do what the Liberals and NDP want and we are not going to do that," the spokesperson said.

And Finance Minister Jim Flaherty yesterday repeated his opposition to a major EI overhaul.

"What Canadians are looking for is a system that works properly," Flaherty said.

"The demand for a total stop to building is not something that can be justified and I don't think that anyone here at this table accepts it," Netanyahu told his cabinet, referring to Jewish settlements in the West Bank, an official said.

Netanyahu said Israel had no plans to set up any new West Bank settlements. But he told Obama, according to the official,

Police seek car seat in Stafford case

MISSING The search for the remains of eight-year-old Victoria (Tori) Stafford has entered its sixth day and Oxford Community Police are asking southern Ontario residents to be on the lookout for the back seat of the suspect vehicle.

On Friday, investigators released photos of a 2003 blue four-door Honda with marks of black spray paint.

Police believe the car, along with the young Woodstock, Ont., girl and her two alleged kidnappers, was at a Home Depot parking lot during the early evening of April 8 — the day Stafford disappeared.

Yesterday, Const. Laurie-Anne Maitland said they are searching for a missing part — the entire back seat. "The entire back is missing," she said. "We're just asking people to be on the lookout."

All hail the goddess of shopping

HineSight

Anne Hines

metronews.ca/hinesight

In every age there are certain people who achieve such outstanding excellence in their chosen field of endeavour they become legendary. Shakespeare. Van Gogh. Wayne Gretzky. And, I would add to that list, my mother-in-law, Glenda.

Glenda shops. No, the rest of us shop. We average consumers decide we need something, go into a store, determine if the price is reasonable and buy it. That's shopping. That sort of shopping is to Glenda what a round of miniature golf would be to Tiger Woods.

To Glenda, a garage sale is like shooting fish in a barrel. Glenda big-game bargain hunts. She makes shopping an extreme sport.

In her world, store flyers become racing forms. And the "suggested retail price" is merely an opening bid.

Among our circle of friends to "Glenda" a purchase means you talked the seller down to half the ticket price, snagged a gift with purchase and got a voucher for a free lunch. Minimum. She's got membership pricing from stores that don't actually offer memberships.

Recently, I managed a "Glenda." In a local junk store, I spotted three pieces of Evesham china. I love Evesham china. I do not own Evesham china because it costs more than china should cost unless it comes with a car or a small country. But I thought, possibly, at junk shop rates, I could afford one piece.

The clerk announced, "We're selling all three pieces together." My heart sank. "And," she said, "the price is seven."

There was a long pause as my brain tried to connect the number seven with anything that made sense in terms of the normal price of these items. Seven camels? Seven years of indentured servitude? Seven years of paying it off on my Visa? Finally, I sputtered, "Seven dollars?"

I left the store with that Ikea ad running in my head, "Start the car! Start the car!" raced to Glenda's place and proudly displayed my prize. Her eyes glistened. Then she said what made me realize how truly outclassed I was. "Did you try to talk them down?"

In northern Vietnam there are a people called the Red Daos. Travellers report this tribe has taken the art of haggling to heights unseen in the rest of the world. If some day Glenda goes missing I'll know she's been spirited away, asked to be their queen. But she'll refuse. She'll hold out for goddess.

Save money, time, the environment

CleanBreak

Rochelle Owen

Need more time to relax? Here are a few tips on how to reduce your ecological impact, save money and time:

Leave your grass clippings on the lawn and save yourself raking time. The grass clippings provide nutrients to your lawn. Let your lawn get a bit of a full head of hair before you mow it, especially in dry conditions. This keeps moisture in and means fewer mows per summer and fewer resources for mowing. Then, for even more reading time, replace lawn with low-maintenance native vegetation.

OK, I have to admit I throw varieties of Hostas around the yard even though they are not native because even with lots of neglect they seem to flourish. I say we should also accept the dandelion. Sure, take a few out with a shovel to the workload of one and cut down on costs.

"Another great tip taken from kindergarten is sharing. Sharing chores, space and Sure, take a things can reduce few out with the workload of one and cut down on costs."

is sharing. Sharing chores, space and things can reduce the workload of one and cut down on costs.

In the last 50 years, average house sizes have almost doubled. Buy a smaller, more efficiently designed house and save cleaning time, ongoing costs and reduce the ecological cost of build and operating. Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Canada has recently launched a rating system for new homes that "promotes the design and construction of high-performance green homes." Contact the Atlantic Chapter of the Canada Green Building Council for more details.

Fill things up before they are activated, like the dishwasher and washer. This will cut down on the number of loads you do and save electricity and water. Use technology to reduce the cost and time of travel by teleworking when possible, or by using audiovisual tools such as Skype to attend a meeting.

A final tip that I have learned the hard way: Measure twice, or in my case three to four times, and cut once. One time I cut outdoor carpet for a little trailer. I did a beautiful job. Except I cut the shape in reverse. So I had to cut again and wasted two hours and carpet.

Happy snoozing.

Environmental success stories

Significant progress has been made on some fronts, leading to optimism for others

EarthTones

Sophia Dore & Andrew Laursen

metronews.ca/earthtones

Sometimes the threats to the environment we are dealing with these days seem daunting. Global warming, deforestation, polluted air and water ... the list goes on.

Certainly these are grave problems requiring international co-operation, however, international co-operation to solve an environmental problem is not without precedent. Although difficult, it has happened on several occasions and threats to the environment have been removed and environmental conditions have improved.

Since your columnists inhabit the Great Lakes area, one of the first to spring to our minds is Lake Erie. In the second half of the 20th century the water quality in Lake Erie declined dramatically due to phosphorus run-off. The high phosphate levels caused eutrophication and resulted in algal blooms. When this algal biomass started to decay it used up a large amount of the oxygen dissolved in the lake's water. The low oxygen concentrations in the water then led to fish kills. The large numbers of dead fish in the water caused water quality to decline still further. At one point, one of Lake Erie's tributaries in Ohio actually caught fire. As you may have guessed, unpolluted water doesn't burn so this was an indication that something was very wrong. Lake Erie became so infamous that Dr. Seuss' environmental classic The Lorax originally contained the line, "I hear things are just as bad up in Lake Erie."

However, in 1972, U.S. Congress passed the Clean Water Act and an agreement was reached between the U.S. and Canada regarding the control of phosphorus entering the Lake. Over time water quality in Lake Erie improved. By the mid 1980s, Lake Erie was an entirely different lake. Fish populations rebounded and the lake and its tributaries no longer caught fire. In 1985, the Ohio Sea Grant program wrote to Dr. Seuss about the cleanup of Lake Erie and he removed the line about Lake Erie from The Lorax.

Another example of international co-operation that has resulted in positive change is the Montreal Protocol. This international agreement concerned the ozone layer and the control of substances such as chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) that deplete the ozone layer. In 1985, it was reported that the ozone layer, a layer of gas that prevents harmful ultraviolet light rays from reaching the Earth's surface, was significantly thinner and holes in this layer had appeared over the Arctic and Antarctic. CFCs were, amongst other things, used as propellants in aerosol sprays such as hairspray, which people used a lot of in the '80s.

The Montreal Protocol, which phased out CFCs, was drafted in 1987 and came into force in 1989. Since then ozone destruction has slowed and some projections have been made that by 2050 the holes in the ozone layer will have closed up and the ozone layer will have recovered.

The Montreal Protocol has been hailed by former UN general secretary Kofi Annan as "perhaps the single most successful international agreement to date." Of course, the end of the '80s big hair era probably didn't hurt either!

Of course Lake Erie and many other lakes in Canada still face damage from nutrients and other forms of pollution, invasive species, and a host of other challenges, and we all still need to slather on the sunscreen, but significant progress has been made on these fronts and should give us encouragement on others.

International co-operation to solve environmental problems is possible the way it exists, all we need is the will.

However, in 1972, U.S. Congress passed the Clean Water Act and an agreement was reached between the U.S. and Canada regarding the control of phosphorus entering the Lake. Over time water quality in Lake Erie improved. By the mid 1980s, Lake Erie was an entirely different lake. Fish populations rebounded and the lake and its tributaries no longer caught fire. In 1985, the Ohio Sea Grant program wrote to Dr. Seuss about the cleanup of Lake Erie and he removed the line about Lake Erie from The Lorax.

Another example of international co-operation that has resulted in positive change is the Montreal Protocol. Camp in harmony with nature

With warm weather upon us, campgrounds and provincial parks are filling up with groups of families and friends anxious to enjoy the great outdoors. However, not all campers are as courteous to the environment as they can and should be.

Parents and scout leaders have been preaching the cardinal rule of camping for decades, but the message of, "If you pack it in, pack it back out," seems lost with some enthusiasts.

"Camping in harmony with nature is about making the right choices before you leave the house," says Wendy Mommersteeg, category director of paper towels and White Swan. "By making a shopping list of the appropriate items to bring, you make it easier on yourself to be environmentally friendly and create a greener place for everyone."

A great starting point is to bring the proper garbage bags to the campsite and remember to separate garbage from recyclables. Messy campgrounds are often a result of garbage debris left from previous campers not properly disposing their waste. Always try to leave your campsite cleaner than you found it. "Make sure to bring reusable dishes instead of disposable ones, along with paper napkins," says Mommersteeg. "Washing dishes reduces waste drastically, and you can sort your paper napkins from the rest of your garbage so you've got a head start when you light your campfire later in the evening."

Reusable dishes need to be washed after every meal. Dirty dishes and food left out can attract unwanted wildlife. Bring biodegradable soap and do not wash anything in your water source, as soap is not designed to go straight into a lake.

5 Green tips for camping

Before you head out to one of Canada's beautiful parks for that much anticipated camping trip, consider the following tips that will enhance your camping experience and care for the environment.

1 Sort your garbage: Bringing different waste bags to separate food scraps and other garbage from paper waste can be helpful. When sorted, recycled paper napkins can multitask to help you start a campfire later. Use reusable dishes: Do not use styrofoam and plastic picnic dishes and flatware.

2 Reusable dishes need to be washed after every meal. Dirty dishes and food left out can attract unwanted wildlife. Bring biodegradable soap and do not wash anything in your water source, as soap is not designed to go straight into a lake.

3 Repack it in reusable containers. Don't bring individual packed food items, and clean up all food scraps while camping.

Meal time: When eating, be sure to use White Swan napkins to help keep mess to a minimum. Made from 100 per cent recycled paper and created using environmentally sustainable manufacturing process, they have less of an impact on the environment.

4 Bathroom etiquette: Bring and use one-ply products like White Swan bathroom tissue because it's made from 100 per cent recycled fibre and breaks down faster.

5 Repackage food: Remove all food packaging and Outlook for banks muddled

Bulls see turning point, but bears still preach caution

Swollen loan losses, soaring write-downs and slumping profits — it's enough to make even seasoned bank shareholders run for cover.

But with Canadian bank stocks on a rebound since March, wary investors are wondering whether it would be wise to hang on for the long-term or head for the exits while the getting is still good. Analysts appear divided on the issue, but surmise that the upcoming round of second-quarter earnings should provide some sense of direction.

Banks, meanwhile, are facing a delicate balancing

Trouble spots

- The key trouble spots are likely defaults in credit card lending, while commercial act for the remainder of fiscal 2009. In order to stay profitable, they have to keep loans flowing, while boosting some rates because the recession is rife with risk. At the same time, they must sop up climbing credit losses and maintain plump capital cushions — all without jeopardizing the sanctity of their dividends.

While acknowledging that the economic outlook mortgages are also expected to show increasing signs of stress.

remains murky, bank bulls argue this earnings season marks a turning point. For the first time in about 18 months, those much-maligned capital markets-related write-downs are not expected to eclipse the earnings parade.

The running tally of those charges hit $20.24 billion for the "Big Six" at the end of January. While more write-downs are anticipated for the February to-April quarter, some analysts suggest this batch of reports could signal those charges are on the wane.

Those in the bear camp, however, are advising investors to be extremely cautious because bank stocks remain fraught with risks. In short, "the economy still sucks," observed John Aiken of Dundee Capital Markets in a research note to clients. He has a majority of "sell" ratings on Canadian banks, most because they are bracing for more bad loans as the economy sheds jobs and consumer bankruptcies soar.

Base metals have potential: Analysts

FORECAST Canadian base metals stocks took it on the chin last year, losing more than two-thirds of their value after getting drop-kicked by plunging materials demand and a wave of panic selling on stock markets.

Now, they are back with a vengeance, more than doubling since early March.

Despite the speedy ascent and some doubts about demand, analysts said stock fundamentals and the longer-term prospects for economic recovery suggest there's plenty more upside in the sector.

John Hughes, a mining analyst at Desjardins Securities, said he favours base metal stocks over gold miners despite a 103 per cent rise in the base metals-heavy S&P/TSX mining subgroup in just over 10 weeks, a gain that would seem overheated compared to the steadier 20 per cent rise of golds over the same period.

While base metal shares may be due for brief period of flat trading, or even a pullback, Hughes said the sector will get a further boost as metals demand ramps up later this year. As well, valuations are still reasonable.

Finance Minister Jim Flaherty said last week that there are promising hints of a recovery in the domestic economy. Government data showed retail sales rose for a third straight month in March, though the combined increase has not made up for steep drops at the end of 2008. Signs of improvement can also be seen in consumer confidence levels and in credit markets, Flaherty said.

Swift action urged on free-trade deals

Canadian wheat and barley will face a major competitive disadvantage in South America unless Ottawa ratifies free-trade agreements with Peru and Colombia, Canada's farm minister has said.

The free-trade deals that Ottawa has negotiated but not yet implemented would give Canadian grain tariff-free access to Colombia and Peru, matching access enjoyed by rival grain producers Argentina and the United States.

"Without free-trade agreements with Colombia and Peru, Canadian producers will lose hard-won, vital market share to our competitors with little chance of regaining that market," said Agriculture

Making a difference

JustSoccer

Ben Rycroft

It's never been easy to be a soccer fan in Canada. From problems that start with the Canadian Soccer Association, the sport's organizing body, to a lack of mainstream media coverage, to the politics that have crippled the game here — it has left more than a few fans of the beautiful game dis-enfranchised.

But one man, and a few others like him, have taken it upon themselves to circumvent the politics and start making changes on their own.

Meet Dino Rossi — perhaps the biggest supporter of Canada's national teams today.

Sick of a lack of promotion for national team games, where only a couple thousand fans would show up, Rossi took it upon himself to become a one-man marketer for the sport.

Using mass emails from a list of contacts that rivals anything any organizing body in Canada has, he bought and sold (for no profit) 2,000 tickets to the men's national team game against Jamaica last year.

This year, to ensure the women's national team will have a good crowd tonight in Toronto against the U.S., he maxed out his credit card to move around $18,000 worth of tickets. Again for no profit.

So, why does he do it? "When Canada's national teams play here I want them to feel at home, for it to be an event and have a big crowd for our players — not to just be playing in front of their friends and family," Rossi said yesterday.

"The CSA is not a marketing company ... this is a women's game, it should have been marketed where women will be listening."

It's the little things that can make a difference.

And fortunately, for the CSA and soccer fans alike, Dino is into the details. He bought seats where the TV cameras will be pointed, "to get better visuals," and pre-bought seats for Toronto FC supporters so they could sit where they normally do to watch the women play.

But despite a couple months of hard work, he was still sitting on 30 tickets as of Friday — $400 out of pocket.

"I was prepared for it ... I like to think though that if you do good things, good things will happen to you."

By Saturday, good things had happened — a group called up looking for exactly 30 tickets. He still won't break even; interest on his credit card has to be paid.

But the game in Canada continues to grow and it's thanks, in large part, to people like Rossi.

Goat Canucks Goat

The Vancouver Canucks' playoff run may have already come to an end, but a charity drive by some of the team's fans just keeps "goat and goating." University students from Langley, B.C., decided to mark the Canucks playoff run this season by donating goats for each win to a village in Kenya. The group spawned a popular Facebook group, which then spawned goatcanucksgoat.com. As a result, 875 goats are now Africa-bound.

KAYAK Lake Echo kayaker Genevieve Orton found the podium at a World Cup event in Poznan, Poland, on Saturday.

Orton was part of the K-4 500 crew that won silver in 1:34.722. Emilie Fournel of Montreal, Kristin Gauthier of Ottawa and Mylanie Barre of Lachenaie, Que., completed the crew, which was about a second slower than Germany.

"This is a fantastic result for us, better than what we expected," said the 25-year-old Orton. "We had a great start in our opening heat and just tried to duplicate that in every round and improve our finish. We were a little bit nervous going into this competition, but everything came together so well."

Orton is one of eight Nova Scotians on the World Cup teams, but was the only one to find the podium.

The final stop on the World Cup tour is two weeks from now in Szeged, Hungary. The team will return home after that for national team trials as the qualifying process for August's world championships in Dartmouth continues.

The Windsor Spitfires defied the odds en route to their first Memorial Cup championship yesterday.

The Spitfires became the first team in history under the current format to win the Canadian Hockey League title after starting the tournament with back-to-back losses, beating the Kelowna Rockets 4-1 in the final in Rimouski, Que.

Spitfires forward Taylor Hall, a top prospect for the 2010 NHL entry draft, was tournament MVP after helping the 34-year-old franchise win its first Memorial Cup.

"Our team's used to doing it the hard way and I don't think we'd do it any way but that," Spitfires blue-liner Ryan Ellis told Sportsnet. "We've done it together and it's special. We're never going to forget this and it's been a blast."

Adam Henrique, Dale Mitchell and Rob Kwiet did the offensive damage for the Spitfires in the first. Kelowna's Colin Long scored eight seconds into the second period but Ellis delivered the knockout punch at 12:38 later.

Spitfires goaltender Andrew Engelage made 17

Massage therapy a lucrative and relaxing job market

Head to Toe

MAT LECOMPTÉ
for Metro Canada

There should be one word that comes to mind after reading the following job description: "You can work outdoors, year round with your hands, never get dirty or worry about developing chronic back pain."

That word: Lie.

Unless, of course, that statement was written about a massage therapist.

In addition to offering a form of pain-free manual labour, massage therapy offers plenty of financial incentive — the average price for a 60-minute massage is about a dollar a minute — and the option to choose your own hours. Not a bad start. From providing spa-powered relaxation to treating sports injuries, massage therapy can be a good career choice for nearly anyone interested in health. Plus, who doesn't like person who gives a great massage?

David Lamy, instructor and admissions councillor at Toronto's Elmcrest College, says a career in massage therapy offers people a rewarding lifestyle that can begin almost instantly upon graduating from their two-year program.

"Right now, there are more jobs available than there are people to do them," says Lamy, who has been a massage therapist for 11 years. He says this is because the various benefits of massage therapy have become more exposed in recent years and are increasingly recognized by many insurance plans as an essential health service.

In terms of career options, Lamy says there really isn't any avenue you can't pursue as a certified massage therapist.

Take 28 year-old Craig Knight for example. A certified massage therapist, entrepreneur and golf enthusiast, Knight started up a small business called Hands at Work almost immediately following graduation. The business focused specifically on providing massage services in corporate environments.

Basically, he would show up at your office with his massage chair and work his magic on employees.

However, as his business grew, he began to get more and more inquiries about appearing at corporate golf tournaments. Considering he knew quite a bit about

How to Twitter your business to the top

CANICE LEUNG
Metro Canada

ONLINE If there was any doubt micro-blogging and social networking site Twitter has arrived as a true online force, it will disappear tomorrow when an estimated 300 people descend upon Mountain View, Calif., for 140: The Twitter Conference.

Over two days at the Computer History Museum, developers, bloggers, the entrepreneurial and PR-types will attend seminars on how to use Twitter to promote businesses.

It's being organized by Parnassus Group, a consulting firm that helps companies track and manage what's being said about them on social media — Twitter, Facebook, blogs, message boards and everywhere on the web.

The Twitter Conference may seem too minuscule a topic to base an entire conference around — especially at $395 US a head — but Steve Broback, head of Parnassus, thinks otherwise.

"(Attendees) are Twitter enthusiasts, and want to commune with other early adopters of what is emerging as a pivotal web-based ecosystem," he says — and the way he puts it, it's a broad audience.

In such a connected age, it would be remiss for a company not to represent itself online, especially on Twitter, a format that lends itself to honest, direct conversations — the 21st century version of word-of-mouth.

"As individuals and consumers, we have a lot of power today that we never had in the past. We can share our impressions on anything, just about anywhere online," says Warren Sukernek, director of content marketing for Radian6, a Fredericton, N.B.-based company similar to Parnassus Group. "The really impactful ones (such as) a simple blog post can spread virally like wildfire."

That's why it's imperative for companies to maintain a strong Twitter presence, build relationships and respond to what's being said about them, he adds.

One company that's succeeded with Twitter is JetBlue Airways (@jetblue). It reports delays, announces fare sales and answers questions.

Sukernek uses the much-grumbled-about Rogers as a hypothetical example: "If you were to send a question to Rogers, and they didn't respond, your impression is that they failed, they stink. Whereas on the other hand, if you said something to them ... and they responded within 10 seconds, and it was relevant, you'd think, 'Wow, that's cool that there's a person there.' Being on Twitter can humanize a company and a brand."

Ignoring customers won't work; that's clear. Neither will shamelessly shill its product, adds Broback.

In a lot of ways, social networking sites really are what they're called. The time-old rules of traditional networking still stand, says Sukernek: Be friendly, helpful and ready to reciprocate. "Networking has existed forever and all the strong benefits of networking don't change today."

Kissing at Cannes

Harvey Weinstein pressed Robert Pattinson into service at the Cannes Film Festival, suggesting the actor auction off a couple of pecks on the cheek to someone's daughter. The Twilight star obliged, and each kiss ended up raising more than $30,000 US for AIDS charity amfAR. METRO WORLD NEWS

Interviewing John Lennon

I Met the Walrus hits bookshelves

KEVIN COURRIER
for Metro Canada

When I "met" John Lennon back in 1966, after The Beatles' final Toronto concert, I accidentally tripped him as he was heading down a flight of stairs on his way to the group's press conference.

John Lennon

Author and lawyer Jerry Levitan did way better. As a 14-year-old determined Beatles fan, he snuck into Lennon and Yoko Ono's Toronto hotel room back in 1969. He ultimately got a taped interview with these two famous pop figures as they were launching their world peace campaign.

"The moment when I barged into the room and saw John and Yoko, I knew it was a profound moment," Levitan recalls. "I knew it would change my life forever." Indeed it did.

In 2008, his tape would subsequently form the basis of an Oscar- and recent Emmy-nominated animated short called I Met the Walrus. Now Levitan's dream story has been turned into a delightfully engaging and informal memoir (also titled I Met the Walrus) about how his brush with greatness altered his life in totally unexpected ways.

"I was definitely an unusual kid ... And I had this great need to see a different world than my north Toronto suburb where I didn't feel that I fit in."

Within that quaint suburb, Levitan describes himself as an asthmatic loner. But he was a huge Beatles fan — and Lennon was his idol. "Lennon was clearly the smartest (Beatle)," Levitan asserts. "His comments were always intelligent, sarcastic, cynical and witty.

That appealed to me." Those attractive qualities are what fed Levitan's desire to meet Lennon.

"He was the kind of person I wanted to be." And when they met, they discussed the prospects for world peace and how high school students could best help in attaining it.

I Met the Walrus, which includes a DVD featuring Levitan's complete audio interview plus silent Super-8 film footage that he shot of the couple, documents the details of his famous scoop — plus later encounters with comedian Jerry Lewis and Pierre Trudeau.

Kiefer's charges could be dropped?

CATCHING A BREAK? Kiefer Sutherland and the alleged victim of a head-butting incident have resolved their differences, clearing the way for an assault charge against the actor to be dismissed, people.com reports.

Sutherland apologized to fashion designer Jack McCollough, who claims the 24 star broke his nose in a scuffle at a New York nightclub on May 5.

"I am sorry about what happened that night and sincerely regret that Mr. McCollough was injured," Sutherland said in a joint statement released to the media.

McCollough said in the statement: "I appreciate Mr. Sutherland's statement and wish him well," according to the release.

The resolution of their differences increases the chances the Manhattan District Attorney will ask the judge that the case be dropped, people.com adds. Sutherland, 42, was charged with third-degree assault, a misde-meanour. Sutherland's next scheduled court appearance is June 22.

Sutherland, who's currently serving a five-year probation term for a DUI conviction, may not be off the hook with L.A. prosecutors, who've stated their intention to review the New York case as a possible probation violation and could seek possible jail time, people.com reports.

Hey, paparazzi: Paris' phone lost

UH OH Paris Hilton had a scare while at the Cannes Film Festival last week. The heiress lost her phone, and was seen frantically retracing her steps at the Hotel Du Cap.

"I don't know where or when it went missing but I know I've got to find it," Hilton told the Daily Mail. "It's the worst thing that could have happened. It has all my contacts in it and the last thing I want is for it to fall into the wrong hands."

Justin dumps his roommate

GROWING UP Justin Long was forced to move out of the California home he shared with comedy actor Jonah Hill — after realizing they were acting "like an old married couple," femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Long, now 30, set up a bachelor pad with 25-year-old Hill while they pursued their dreams of making it big as movie stars.

But Long, who's rumoured to be back together with on-off girlfriend Drew Barrymore, flew the nest after a string of nagging fights with Hill over how to keep their house clean.

Kelly's custody battle goes down the potty

The couple — who filed for divorce in January after two years of marriage — is also fighting over a litany of other parenting issues — including when Hermès, who is set to enter preschool this fall, will be potty trained. (Rutherford has also told Us she continues to breastfeed her son.)

Rutherford and Giersch agreed to have their son wear a pull-up diaper and begin potty training when he "desires."

Rutherford — who is about eight-and-a-half months pregnant with the couple's second child, a girl — said her kid began to "change" when his German businessman father tried to potty train him.

Amir Pich-

vai, the court-appointed child attorney for Hermès, said the parents need to work together to "avoid confusion to the child" on the potty training issue. Their next custody trial dates are set for late July.

Nigel ignites Dance furor with same-sex remarks

OH NO YOU DIDN'T Nigel Lythgoe is defending his comments against a same-sex dance pair on Thursday night's So You Think You Can Dance premiere, usmagazine.com reports.

The judge sparked outrage after he told male partners Misha Belfer and Mitchel Kibbel: "I think you will probably alienate a lot of our audience. I mean, we've always had the guys dance together on the show, but they've never really done it in each other's arms before.

"Do you know what? I'd like to see you both dancing with a girl," he continued.

After the show, he posted on Twitter: "The same-sex ballroom guys did remind me of Blades of Glory. However, I'm not a fan of Brokeback ballroom."

GLAAD president Neil G. Giuliano released a statement Friday: "It's unacceptable for this kind of blatant homophobia to occur. Fox Entertainment and Nigel Lythgoe owe Misha, Mitchel and the whole LGBT community an apology."

Lythgoe stuck by his comments on Twitter, writing in response: "I am very sad the word 'homophobe' is being used."

"That is someone who hates homosexuals. I dislike effeminate dancing! Wake up and listen!"

Sun seeker Brooke reformed

BEAUTY RITUAL She's got one of the most recognizable — and radiant — faces in the world. But years of sun worship caught up with Brooke Shields when she got some sobering news from her doctor recently.

"I had a spot on my face. The doctor scraped it, and it turned out to be precancerous," Shields, 43, tells People. "I was scared."

The actress had the spot removed and says she's doing "fine." But the cancer scare served as a wake-up call for a woman who "used to think it was the best thing in the world to be baking in the sun" and who, as a teen, would indulge in hot-weather rituals like "baby oil and tinfoil and lemon in your hair."

Mel's strange stress gadgets

COPING MECHANISM Mel Gibson has splashed out $100,000 US on a machine to help him cope with his stressful private life, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The actor, whose wife Robyn filed for divorce in April, is struggling to cope with the attention surrounding the breakdown of his marriage and has invested in a device to increase positive energy in his body, according to the site.

A source told National Enquirer magazine: "Most people would look at the flow machine and think Mel has lost his mind. You lie on this machine and strap your feet in. The device then emits some kind of torsion field waves that are supposed to unlock clogged energy, which eases psychological tension. It is pretty weird, but Mel swears by it."

The source added: "From telephone healing sessions to therapeutic foot baths, Mel has tried it all. The flow machine is Mel's latest holistic gadget."

Metro Recipe of the DayPepper Steak with Leek Mashed Potatoes*INGREDIENTS:

2 tbsp (25 ml) mixed or black peppercorns, coarsely crushed
 4 beef tenderloin steaks, 3/4-in. (2 cm) thick, trimmed
 1 tsp (5 ml) extra virgin olive oil chopped parsley or snipped fresh chives to garnish

LEEK AND MUSTARD MASHED POTATOES:

2 lbs (900 g) potatoes, peeled and cut into chunks
 2 tsp (10 ml) extra virgin olive oil
 200 g leeks, finely chopped
 1/2 cup (125 ml) low-fat milk
 1 tbsp (15 ml) whole-grain mustard
 1 1/2 tbsp (25 ml) reduced-salt margarine pepper to taste

METHOD:

1. Place potatoes in pot and pour over boiling water to cover by 2 in. (5 cm). Bring back to boil, then reduce heat and cook for 15–20 minutes or until potatoes are very tender.
 2. Meanwhile, spread crushed peppercorns on plate and press steaks into them until coated with peppercorns on all sides.

3. Heat oil for mashed potatoes in nonstick frying pan.
 4. Mound potatoes on each warmed plate and place steak next to it. Drizzle pan juices over steaks and sprinkle with parsley or chives. Serve immediately.

Add leeks and cook, stirring constantly 3–5 minutes or until tender. Transfer to plate lined with two layers of paper towel to drain.
 Heat milk in pot until hot.

4. When potatoes are tender, drain them, shaking colander or sieve to remove any excess water, and return to pan. Pour hot milk over potatoes; mash until completely smooth.
 Add leeks, mustard and margarine, and season with pepper. Beat well to mix, then cover and keep warm.

5. Heat ridged cast-iron broil pan over high heat until hot. Brush pan with olive oil, then reduce heat to medium-high. Place steaks in pan and cook 3 minutes per side for rare, 3 1/2 minutes per side for medium-rare, 4 minutes per side for medium, 5 minutes per side for well done.

6. Mound potatoes on each warmed plate and place steak next to it. Drizzle pan juices over steaks and sprinkle with parsley or chives. Serve immediately.
